Tell us why! Managing your computer's download folder is a lot like dealing with email: if you don't have a good strategy to stay organized, it can get really dirty, really fast. Even now, many of us treat the download folder as a dying ground. This is a place we pay little attention to except those odd times that we have to find a specific file or free up space on our hard drive. Otherwise, it is usually out of view and mind. Don't give everything in your computer's phasing closet the digital equivalent of The Showlong. These two quick tips can make it easier to keep your files under control and search files faster. One of the easiest ways to manage your download is to send your browser to the desktop by default downloading files to your desktop. Since you're always looking at your desktop, you're more likely to delete files and keep it clean. Then, when you download something new, it's very easy to find on the desktop, because it's one of the few files sitting on your desktop. Here's how to adjust your browser settings to send downloads to the desktop. Chrome's download setting. Chrome: Click the Hembarger menu icon in the top right-hand side and go to Settings > Show Top Settings... > Download. Click Replace... Button, select your desktop in the window that pops up, and click OK. Firefox Options Window. Firefox: Click the Hembarger menu icon in the top right-hand side and select options. In the new window that open, open the normal tab and then browse... Button under download heading. Next, select your desktop in the File Explorer window that opens and click Select Folder. Internet Explorer: Click the cog of settings in the upper right-hand side and select Select Download. In the next window that open, clockuptans in the lower right hand side. Another window will open; click Browse... Select the button and then your desktop in the File Explorer window that opens. Improve file explorer file explorer in Windows 8.1. If you don't like to use your desktop as download-dying ground if your browser preferences are ignored for these odd times, the quick setting in file explorer can really help Find a recent download in no time. Open file explorer and start by selecting your download folder in the left-hand navigation column. In Windows 8.1, you should see four columns in the main window: name, date, modify, type, and size. By default, file explorer names via your download folder side. It's a great default setting for most folders, but with downloads-where you don't even know the name of the file you're looking for-it's not ideal. Instead, click the modified column in the date until you see a down-facing arrow at the top of the column title. This will automatically put your most recent downloaded files at the top of the folder, making them very easy to find. File Explorer will remember your choice and will be managed by history in descending order to open your downloaded folder at all times. Simple, but effective!
